FAQ Addendum

1. What is a sight draft, and how is it being used in this transaction?

A sight draft is a negotiable instrument governed by UCC §3-104 and §3-303, demanding payment upon presentation. It functions as a lawful payment obligation from the GM FAMILY TRUST to extinguish debt in full.

2. Is the sight draft legal and enforceable?

Yes. Sight drafts and trust-backed obligations are enforceable under the Uniform Commercial Code Articles 3 & 8.

3. Why aren't we using traditional fiat currency or financing?

The Trust operates using private commercial instruments to lawfully extinguish obligations, which is a permissible method under commercial and trust law.

4. Are we being asked to extend credit or loan funds?

No. This is not a loan request. The dealership is not asked to extend credit.

5. Is this process backed by consumer law?

Yes. It is supported by TILA (15 U.S.C. §1601), Cal. Code Regs. Tit. 10 §943, 15 U.S.C. §1681n, UCC Articles 3 & 8, and the FTC Act.

6. What documentation accompanies the sight draft?

The trust provides the Sight Draft, Trust Bond, Letter of Instruction, Payment Ledger, Affidavit of Tender, and any needed proof of trust authority.

7. What happens if we refuse to accept the instrument?

Refusal without lawful cause constitutes a dishonor under UCC §3-502 and may result in Notice of Dishonor, Notice of Default, and UCC-1 lien filing.

8. Do we need legal counsel to review this?

You may seek legal review, but must respond with specific legal grounds if refusing. Counsel should understand UCC, Regulation Z, and Trust Law.

9. What are you requesting from us, specifically?

We ask you to accept the trust's lawful tender and proceed with the vehicle transfer. Decline only with lawful written cause.

10. Who is responsible if we accept this and something goes wrong?

The Trust is responsible. You are protected when acting in good faith under commercial law (UCC §2-104).
